Are you interested in Bannockburn's geography, history, geology, its neighbors, plants, gardens, architecture, our fascinating residents, our neighborhood artists and notables, or the famous Battle of Bannockburn? Right! Who isn't?

The Banner invites 100 - 800 word submissions on these topics or others of special interest to our community. Especially welcome are articles with photos, maps or designs.

Banner Publication Schedule:

December 2010 Issue -- Deadline November 22. 1) Neighbors of Bannockburn Heights: The "Other" Bannockburn 2) "Bannockburn's Working Artists" 3) "Some Fascinating Bannockburn Interiors"

June 2011 Issue -- Deadline June 6. 1) Bannockburn History: "Before Development" 2) Some Hidden Gardens of Bannockburn 3) Fascinating Residents: "A Profile of _____"

To write one of these articles or to suggest one of your own, please email the Editor:

Is anything wrong with this picture?

Do you think the rusting Trolley Car in front of Glen Echo National Park needs attention? The Park Service thinks so, but doesn't have the resources to fix it. Meanwhile, the car continues to rust and dilapidate. Should we care? Does it send a wrong message about our neighborhood? Should our community join with others in our area to get it fixed up? If you think so, let us hear from you!

Non-Native Invasive Species in Our Neighborhood, by Seth Goldstein

Porcelain Berry is an invasive vine which overwhelms foliage, as in the third picture (which looks just like the entrance to Concord Park).

Pull it out of the ground and down from trees (but watch out for Poison Ivy when you do the good deed).

Read Seth's full article in the December edition of The Bannockburn Banner.
